In Englands armes, an Orphane once did lie:
The question was, what should be done with it?
Its Step-dame mercilesse would have it sent
To th'wilderness, the rest all full content.
But when the Fathers bowels did foresee,
What sorrows in the wilderness should bee,
He went with it: and when through scarcity
It cry'd, he heard, & straight-way sent supply.

A stout-horn'd beast this Orphan spying here.
Threatned forthwith in peices it to teare.
Whose hornes not able for to toss & gore,
This Hand shall reach, and lie, the Ocean o're.
A kennell of stout hounds awakened then,
And scar'd this little creature to his den.
But left the Orphan should it quite away dread,
The hunters hand cut off his horned head.

No sooner was an house here built, to keep
This Out-cast dry, where it might rest & sleep.
But now an Airy thing above all mish
Would have roofs, walls, foundations down again.
And hook them forth to by rents & strife
Without all house-room, it might end its life.
Which when the Builders saw, they drive it hence:
Wherin appear'd a special providence.

But by & by, grave Momanattock rose,
Grim Sasacus with swarms of Pequottoes,
Who smote our hindermost, whose arrows stung,
Who vow'd with English blood their ground to dung.
But Mistick flames & th' English sword soon damps
This rampant crue, pursues them in their swamps,
And makes them fly their land with fear & shame;
That th' Indians dread is now the English name.

Just when these hounds first bit, Truth suffers scorne,
Strange errours bark, the devil winds his horne
And blows men almost wilde: Opinion
Within the house would mistresse it alone.
The poyson kills, makes light, loose, high, divides,
And would have broke to factions, fractions, sides.
The Thrones were therfore fer, and in that day
When Pequots fly, Opinion hasts away.

Great Earth-quakes frequently (as one relates)
Foreruns strange plagues, dearths, wars & change of states.
Earths shaking fits by venemous vapours here.
How is it then they hurt not, as elsewhere?
Succeeding ages may interpret well,
What those mutations are, which these foretell.
Some think that now they hurt not any men
But only those who were not shaken then.

The birds consulted once, who should appear
Against their enemies in battel heer.
To strip us of our food was first the plott:
Upon the Pigeons therefore fell the lot.

Spoyling the fields in dreadfull companies.
When to their losse they thus had took much prey.

To cut off all the English at a blow.
Be wise, look noble Uncas unto it:
Thou canst scarce save thy self by Foxens wit.
And by thy fall comes in the English wo.
If it may be by Miantonimo.
Brave Uncas thinks, he is too high, by th'head.
And cuts it off; so wee delivered.

When as the strongest scarce could help the weak.
How most were heal'd, some doe not understand,

While Europe burnes & broiles & dyes in flames,
And Englands sobs are heard from Tweed to Thames,
While Irelands ashes up and down do fly,

While poor Barbados cryes the Pestilence!
And Virginia-land thrusts out her sons from thence;

A Prognostication.

The morning Kings may next ensuing year,
With mighty Armies in the aire appear,
By one mans means there shall be hither sent
The Army, City, King and Parliament.
Two that have travell'd round about the earth,
Shall by their coming here prevent a dearth.
A Child but newly born, shall then foretell
Great changes in a Winding-sheet; Farewell.
